Anonymous - The only comment I would have is the way the content progresses in Respiratory Care Procedures 2 with Mechanical Vent. Specifically with how it started with learning the basics of mechanical ventilation, then going back to noninvasive positive pressure with BIPAP / CPAP. And then back to working with ventilator modes. It just seemed like it would make more sense to do the noninvasive PPV stuff and then start the basics of mechanical vent. And then go into the ventilator modes. Made it a little confusing with adjusting theory wise switching back and forth and then how that lined up with the lab.
