Humanity: One Species but How Many Races?

Stephen Kaufman, Chair, Social Sciences & Humanities; Kevin Reilly, Professor of History; Angela Bodino, Professor of English

Room F108A&C

This session is based on their nationally reviewed book titled Racism: A Global Reader, which also includes an award winning online course taught by the group. The online course focuses on global patterns of racism: literary, historical and anthropological perspectives. This workshop focuses on the shared biology of all members of the human species and the question of how many races there are within that one species. Through the use of interactive models and small and large group conversations, participants will examine the criteria by which racial categorizations are constructed.

Study Grant – The Human Immune System

Jean Helgeson, Professor of Biology

Room H227

Learn how the immune system works and what goes wrong when it does not work. What happens when you get immunizations, and why do you need a new flu immunization each year? Why do we have allergies? Why does the immune system stop working in patients with AIDS? How is inflammation different from specific response? All this and more....

E-Print

Julie Youngblood & LeAnne Eaton, Academic Computing

Room J129

E-print is a web-based system for securely and quickly presenting existing reports to end-users. Using a web browser and Adobe Acrobat Reader, E-print users can view reports in a format that is easy to read, search and print. Learn how to obtain access, sign-on and view reports.

"It's All About I:" Intentional Living Based on Intuition and Integrity

Buzz Kolbe, Business and Personal Life Coach

Room C104

An invitation to discover, explore and honor your values and create an alignment towards Intentional Living!

Introduction to Cooperative Learning

Fred Jury, Professor of Chemistry

Room G218

Today's interdependent work environment demands that students learn to function in teams and develop good social skills as part of their higher education experience. Cooperative learning is a learning pedagogy that facilitates this need and serves as an excellent model of active learning. Join us to learn two effective cooperative learning techniques in this workshop.

Writing Matters

Joyce M. Miller, Professor of English

Room H231

Should periods and commas step inside or outside quotation marks? Should sentences ever begin with the words "Due to?" What are the seven primary rules that will end forever our unruly "comma confusion?" For the answers to these and other writing matters, join us for this lighthearted hour of enlightenment.

Concurrent Sessions – 2:45-4 p.m.

The Shaping Role of Language: What Do We Say When We Talk About Race?

Stephen Kaufman, Chair, Social Sciences & Humanities; Kevin Reilly, Professor of History; Angela Bodino, Professor of English

Room F108-A & C

This session is also based on their nationally reviewed book titled, Racism: A Global Reader, which also includes an award winning online course taught by the group. The online course focuses on global patterns of racism: literary, historical and anthropological perspectives. This seminar examines some key terms used in discussions about race and racism since the meanings of words tend to blur and thus blur an understanding of the unique character of racism. Some relevant terms are prejudice and bias, discrimination and class, ethnocentrism and nationalism, Hispanic and ethnicity. Racism differs from many other forms of prejudice, with dramatic consequences.

Hot Topics in Higher Education Law

Mari McGowan, Attorney at Law - Abernathy, Roeder, Boyd and Joplin

Room C103

Current issues in law and their impact on faculty, staff and administrators, including recent developments in privacy rights, free speech, religion, and student's rights.

Learning Communities

Tracey Elliott, Professor of Sociology

Room G219

Join us for an introduction to integrating disciplines and creating Learning Communities. Interdisciplinary Learning Communities create an exciting venue for student learning and faculty development. This workshop will provide an overview of the Learning Communities philosophy and offers examples of successful course pairings.

Staying in the SMART ZONE

John Anthony Theatre

Worry and stress drain intelligence and hold back performance. After hearing this dynamic and entertaining presentation, you will be able to release the hold that drains your own intelligence maximizing your performance both at home and on the job. Dr. Fletcher will address how to stay productive, even in the face of organizational change, and stay in your SMART ZONE to improve the bottom line.

"How Can You Be a Part of Our SACS Internal Review?"

Tom Rodgers, Provost of Spring Creek Campus

Room B222

Join us to learn how you can become a part of SACS and CCCCD history.

Different Folks, Different Spiritualities

Tony Howard, Professor of English

Room C104

You are having lunch with five people: one says there are 330,000,000 gods and goddesses; one says there is no god; one says there is one god in three persons; one says there is one god whose name must not be spoken; one says there is one god and Mohammad is his prophet. Want to live long enough to eat dessert? Come see what we may make of all this...
